

Mercer County Sustainability Element

What is the Mercer County Sustainability Element?

The Sustainability Element is part of the Mercer County Master Plan. It aims to enhance the County's sustainability and minimize its environmental impact on a governmental and community level as the County develops its Master Plan.

What topics does the Sustainability Element cover?

The County is conducting a thorough assessment to determine the current sustainability performance of the County Government and community. Following this, the Sustainability Element will focus on:

- Climate action and resilience
- Natural resource and water conservation
- Sustainable transportation
- Equity, community, and green economic development
